Fine tuning in grammar necessary. Few examples to help them: In their abstract they mentioned two alternatives: they start their sentence as our first.... which is good. For their second alternative, they used "in addition, this is redundant because they put at the end, it is their second alternative. They should put "the second alternative is or second alternative includes.... It reads better.

In the document, they start their sentence as Fig. (...), they are starting the sentence and they should avoid abbreviating. They should start their paragraph with the complete word and also they cannot start their paragraph or sentences with numbers. If the authors go over and make those changes, the article is in good standing.
