PART 2:

FINAL EVALUATOR'S comments on revised paper (if any)	Authors' response to final evaluator's comments
I must commend the author for this update. However, I want the author to do a little more justice to this paper. The results of the study showed that 72.9 % of the respondents were females. I want to be sure this is not a purposive sampling because farming in Nigeria is known to be males work rather than females. How the author was able to get more females for this study than males is worrisome since they were not purposively selected. 1. In Figure 2 which is the awareness about family planning. The percentage for Yes and No responses were not showing. 2. Figure 3 which is sources of family planning information will be better understandable in bar chat rather than the used pie chart. 3. Let all the percentages to show in Figure 4 and 5 4. Conclusion should come before recommendation 5. I finally recommend that the author should endeavour to give this work to editor for grammatical and typographic errors	Dear, reviewer, I commend your efforts, in fact, they are helpful suggestions, we have more females in this study because the study allowed a sort of more consideration for women since they are the one who are essentially involve in family planning (moderation). Figure 2 now has the percentages, Figure 3 has been changed to a bar chat. The conclusion has been moved up before the recommendations. Thank you so much for taking your time to go through this manuscript thoroughly.
