We follow the guideline of many reputed international regulatory bodies like COPE.

Kindly certify that your new manuscript does not fall under the category of self-plagiarism. You are kindly requested to follow this guideline given in our website (<http://www.sciencedomain.org/page.php?id=sdi-general-editorial-policy>), which reads as

"Self-plagiarism, also referred to as 'text recycling', is a topical issue and is currently generating much discussion among editors. Opinions are divided as to how much text overlap with an author's own previous publications is acceptable. We normally follow the guidelines given in COPE website. Editors, reviewers and authors are also requested to strictly follow this excellent guideline (Reference: Text Recycling Guidelines: http://publicationethics.org/text-recycling-guidelines)."

Kindly visit the given COPE link page and ensure that your paper does not fall in this category. If you find that your manuscript may fall under the category of 'self-plagiarism', please take necessary steps to modify the manuscript and send us the modified one. It will help you avoid future complication and to increase your prestige in international scientific community.

Only after your certification/modification we can proceed for 'peer review'.

We hope you'll appreciate our strict and high publication standards, which are designed to give benefits to the authors in long run.

This is to verify that the paper 2013/BJAST/5131 and the other conference publication by myself available at (http://ieeexplore.ieee.org/xpl/login.jsp?tp=&arnumber=1040409&url=http%3A%2F%2Fieeexplore.ieee.org%2Fexpls%2Fabs_all.jsp%3Farnumber%3D1040409) are not the same papers. What I published in the IEEE Conference is the preliminarily result of the same topic, however, 2013/BJAST/5131 is the result of the completed study and has almost twice the size of that conference paper. Therefore, this does not fall under the category of "text-recycling".
