Subject: RE: Request for final decision for manuscript number 2013_BJAST_5246

I checked the article and have a feeling: the article is interesting, particularly a study on the daily returns over the period 1st January, 2010 to 31st December, 2012 of the ASI of the Nigerian stock exchange. However, the article has many English misstates and mathematically not well written. Moreover, it does not include volumes and page numbers of the cited references, and there is no sufficiently recent reference, either.

In view of some comments on the article from your reviewers:

1st Reviewer "... the authors have refused to do what they were asked to do but insisting that they are right. I still want to state here again that they have not done anything new, no contribution to knowledge. They are only stating what other authors have done."

2nd Reviewer: "... the paper has many impurities still. Please take advantage of an experienced colleague and scientific writer. ... more new and deep research in the references needed, please".

I would like to recommend rejecting the article for publication in the journal. However, I am not an expert working in in this math finance field, and so you may like to get a better suggestion from another editor.
