Compulsory REVISION comments
Minor REVISION comments	This paper deals with a fashionable and interesting topic. Thus, the main focus of the paper is offering a method to try to assess the impact of telecommunications infrastructure on economic growth. This is based on a more general theoretical framework of macroeconomic theory. Policy implications are enough justified and the conclusions worth consideration. The paper is well written and motivated, and also offers a well conducted and detailed survey of previous literature on the field. The application of a 3SLS procedure is appropriate. And the data set seems to be unique and valuable. Overall the paper is interesting, fits with the
