| Compulsory REVISION comments | Manuscript consisted a lot of repetition: In abstract the connection of behaviour-based safety and accidents are in three times, Objectives, research questions and hypothesis (page 4-5) are the same. Dr. Geller's contribution was mentioned two times. What the employees know about BBS and how is guaranteed their knowledge? (page 11) Where comes at-risk behaviours and accidents? There is no elaboration about the effect of possible third element on correlation. |                                                                                                                                                                               |
| Optional/General comments    | Many of references are old.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |                                                                                                                                                                               |
