PART 2: Review Comments

|                                            | Reviewer's comment                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | Author's comment (if agreed with reviewer, correct the manuscript and highlight that part in the manuscript. | Compulsory REVISION comments | The paper contains interesting institutional details and information about the country. The integration of the mathematical results into the discussion is generally not very helpful, such as that about principal components. If the paper is to be published in English, it needs a great deal of editing. | We have improved some presentations and enlarged the scope and specific crisis in Nigeria that have been inhibitions to transportation. The rising Boko Haram Islamic sets and other aspects. |
| Minor REVISION comments      | I could not understnd the model suggested in lines 174-182. There is a technical error in line 180, E[...] does not contain ei. Likewise, the cost of travel suggested in lines 190-194 seems to be a description of a binary variable. There is no reference to the Appendix in the paper.                          | This has also been taken care of with new formats and model specification.                                                                                                                    |
| Optional/General comments    |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | As far as our update of the paper we made fair attempts.                                                                                                                                      |
