PART 2:

FINAL EVALUATOR'S comments on revised paper (if any)	Authors' response to final evaluator's comments
I am sorry to say that this revised paper does not actually read like the one I reviewed before. I had wanted to concentrate on the parts I suggested some revisions but when I decided to take a second quick look at the other parts of the paper, I found quite a few mistakes that should not have been on a revised paper. I am attaching it back so that you can take a look at it again and decide if you'd like to make the changes or not. There is not one specific thing to comment on. I have marked and commented on the areas throughout the paper, especially on page 14.	I made all changes through out the paper As I mentioned, in Sudan the deficit is not used to create goods and services i.e not for investment purpose but used to pay off foreign debt obligation and to finance the civil war in the south and the armed conflicts in Darfur. Investment has an effect on the economy in Sudan but not as expected and as we know most investment is in the agricultural sector which is affected by weather conditions.
