

Editor's Comment:

It seems to me that the authors were not familiar with the referencing system. I have no problem with the content the manuscript carried, yet the current reference format jeopardize everything.

First, I do not offend the accuracy of reference information, but the style of all reference shall be treated under one form that regulated by the BJEMT no matter how they were presented in the source literature. You should not copy directly copy the reference from the source without amendments.

Second, I completely agreed that the reference shall be marked with numbers. However, bear in mind [1] or [6] (just for example) never say or perform any activities in the text, but the authors of the [1] or [6] say or do something that related to the research topic. In addition, the reference shall be numbered in sequence with the order of appearance. In your case, [1] shall be Subramanian, A. and Wei, S-J., "The WTO promotes trade, strongly but unevenly", Journal of International Economics, 72 (2007): 151–175. Because this was the first work you cite in your paper. Therefore, the authors should place Subramanian..... in the first position in reference list.

Again, I would suggest the authors ask for further editing service from any other academician or from the technical service of BJEMT.
