PART 2:

FINAL EVALUATOR’S comments on revised paper (if any)	Authors’ response to final evaluator’s comments
The revised version is richer and better than the original one Writing stills need more careful proofread. For instance, in the abstract, “Grate differences”, should it be “great”? Another example, “Researchers have been researching the affordability problem with different methods from different perspectives since it was paid attention to by policy makers from 20th century 80 years.” Sentences like these are awkward. Also, “Description Statistics” should be descriptive statistics. These are just a few examples. Reference format is not right.	Thank you very much for your patience and meticulous work. Your affirmation is the greatest encouragement to me. My responses are as follows: (1) Some statements and errors have been corrected as marked in yellow. (2) Reference format has been modified according to the papers published before in BJEMT.
