| Minor REVISION comments      | There are a few things that should be corrected in order to proceed to publication: <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Abstract: rephrase the last phrase of the abstract;</li> <li>2. To respect the guidelines of the Journal and to help others when searching for your paper you might consider adding another keyword such as "Determinants" and/or "apathy"</li> <li>3. In the text appear the references numbered, which is correct, but I can't do the relation between this numbers and the list of references because you put them in an alphabetic order. So you should change this.</li> <li>4. It was important to explain better the "Political Ideology" for instance what you mean by: "more liberal than Most College Students"?</li> <li>5. The text in line 150 (the beginning of the text) and 151 should be part of the results</li> <li>6. In line 163 and 193 you speak about the ages bellow your study. Why do you do that? They don't enter in this study...</li> </ol> |                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Optional/General comments    | Nevertheless, the study theme is very relevant and the method used is clear and suitable. Therefor I propose to have a minor revise of the article and resubmit.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |                                                                                                                                                                                      |
