Compulsory REVISION comments	In this research cardio- metabolic risk factors and insulin resistance among obese adolescents in South Indian population was studied. Number of cases is small, but the necessary measurements were taken. It was shown that a high prevalence of cardio-metabolic risk factors among obese adolescents with elevation in insulin level and insulin resistance.	As we done this study on the prevalence of cardio metabolic risk factors especially in obese adolescents, prevalence will be very high. It is consistent with previous literature. In future we are considering this study by taking large sample size.
