

Abstract

Introduction: Meningitis is a serious infection.....

Conclusions:

.....many case-patients with any mortality.....

Introduction

children. Among the 13 sub-types of.....

.....rigidity, sudden fever with high body temperature, and

Discussion

According to the current study, there were two major.....

The performed study revealed a predominance of cases in males among both children and adults during the periods of investigation....., in other publications [19,20] has been confirmed a possibility for an increased risk among males, but taking in consideration the almost equal care-seeking behavior among males and females, future studies are necessary in this direction.

as over-crowding, as well as active and passive smoke exposure[21,22].

.....diagnosis, which could lead to mis-diagnosis of the condition, and, in this way, to inappropriate management of cases.

bacterial meningitis. Taking in consideration the fact that this serotype has been noted to cause the highest mortality....., there is a necessity about further investigations of that observation.