I have seriously read all versions of manuscript and review comments. Urban sprawl is a common phenomenon in the world, especially in the developing countries. Its cause and impact on society and ecological environment have absorbed much attention, and better understanding them is the foundation of sustainable development. After revisions according to comments, the paper could better exhibit the history and future of urban sprawl in his study area. Then, i think it can be published though more works are necessary to understand the mechanism of sprawl.
